Are We Training Our Children?

Adrian Rogers - June 5, 2021

“Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it.” (Proverbs 22:6)

Are we training our children? The word train in the dictionary says this: “to prepare for a contest, to instruct by exercise, to drill, to form to a proper shape, to discipline for use.” Great basketball players do not learn how to play basketball by reading a book. They are trained. They are coached. We have to train and coach our children. We have to pray. We have to teach. We have to plead. We have to show by example.

If we teach our children and that's all we do, we'll teach them one thing, but someone else can come along and teach them something else. But when we train them, they get something through the pores of their skin into their very psyche through this training. There's a difference between teaching and training.

If you have children, have you made a pattern of training them, or have you simply taught them without example?
